

THE ARIZONA KICKER.

The "Utah Terror" Comes Near Losing His Life Through a Misunderstanding.

A STRANGER'S MISTAKE—A chap calling himself the "Utah Terror" struck this town last Tuesday with a whoop. As near as he could figure, the wave of civilization was not due here for five years yet, while as a matter of fact it rolled over us more than a year ago. He was about six years out in his calculations. The terror was mounted on a mule. Once upon a time it was the proper caper for a terror to ride his mule into a saloon and drink his whisky while seated in his saddle. The stranger headed his animal for the Red Front saloon and dug in the spurs and uttered his warwhoop, but the next thing he knew the doctor was probing for bullets, and he had gone out of the warwhoop profession. The city marshal had been looking for such a break, and he was on the spot to check it. The mule was killed at the first shot, but it is believed at this writing that the man will, in time, recover sufficiently to limp out of town in search of some spot where the good old-fashioned customs are preserved in all their purity.

NOT IDENTIFIED—Tuesday afternoon last a stranger who looked as solemn as if he had buried a wife and ten children came into town by the Cherry Valley road on a bay mule and dismounted at Scott's bank. Some of the boys sized the stranger up as an undertaker looking for an opening, while others had a suspicion that he was up to snuff. This state of uncertainty lasted about fifteen minutes, during which time someone unloosed the saddle girths and attached the saddle to a hitching post by a rope about twenty feet long. The stranger found Mr. Scott alone in the bank and pulled a gun on him and asked for a loan of $500. Mr. Scott never loans money without good security. He dodged the gun and raised an alarm, and the solemn man bolted for the street and his mule. He jumped into the saddle with a whoop of defiance, and when the mule went out from under him he was probably the most surprised man in Arizona. He got up and began shooting, but our efficient City Marshal, assisted by about twenty prominent citizens, turned loose on him and brought his career to a dead stop. The mule made a bolt for it and could not be caught, but he bore the brand of a New Mexico ranch. Nothing was found on the man to identify him. He had two guns, fifty cartridges, $2 in cash and a plug of tobacco. He was buried at the expense of the city, and the look of chagrin which covered his face as he was laid away was so marked as to excite general comment. He probably lived in some back township where no newspapers are taken and therefore knew nothing of the changes of the last five years.

The Sailors Got Seclusion.

Years ago, when the full rigged man-o'-war was "right in line," the Hartford put into Boston harbor and dropped anchor off the Charlestown navy yard one fine day. The Hartford at that time was as much an object of wonder and admiration as the gallant New York or Boston is to-day, and visitors flocked aboard her in great numbers. Her captain, an obliging man, made every effort to see that his visitors were well cared for, and personally he showed party after party over the ship. At the mess hour it was his habit to take the curious down to the berth deck that they might see how the sailors ate their meals. That was before they had tables on board the vessels of war, and when the mess cloth was spread on the deck.

The sailors did not mind this at first, but after a time it became irksome. They came to the conclusion that their privacy was being interfered with, and so finally they decided to put a stop to it. The next time the captain took a party down to show them his happy family as it paid tribute to the inner man an old salt, the acknowledged leader, reached for a certain bowl. This was the signal, and forthwith a dozen sunburned, brawny arms were stretched forward toward that self same bowl, and a lively tussle for possession ensued. The captain stood aghast. Such unseemly conduct paralyzed him, but before he could recover there was an apparently vicious "scrap" going on, and before his visitors, too. This was too much for him, and afterward the sailors partook of their meals uninterrupted.—Boston Globe.

Aids to Digestion.

The morsel of old cheese taken after dinner is decidedly digestive. A roasted rabbit, to suit a fastidious taste, must have hung until it was a little "high."

A new "midnight bite" of cheese, toast, etc., answers to the name of "Scotch partridge."

A peculiarly delicious sauce made in Egypt and served at hotels is said to be the "essence of grasshopper."

Dyspeptics are recommended to eat of the long sticks of Italian bread. If it doesn't cure them, it will do them no harm.

Household Hints.

Mend the torn pages of books with white tissue paper.

Save your cold tea. It is excellent for cleaning grained wood.

Clean plaster of paris ornaments with wet starch brushed off when dry.

Clear, black coffee diluted with water and containing a little ammonia will clean and restore black clothes.

Denim is one of the best materials for dress facings. It will outlast six facings of silesia and will not rub your shoes white, as does the canvas.
